

The green label is based on extraction from the tops of the hemp plant, the flowers and the leaf green are included. This creates a dark, viscous oil that contains a lot of chlorophyll and therefore tastes bitter. This variant is made with organic olive oil. The oil contains CBD but also side branches such as CBDA CBG (see the Golden State disc below). This means that the oil can be taken for multiple complaints, for example joint and muscle pain, migraine, headache, insomnia, stress and cramp.

The yellow label is produced only from the flowers of the hemp plant, this produces a clear oil and is therefore also called 'clear'. The 'clear' is chlorophyll free and is more fluid, therefore it's easier to drip. However, the production of this oil is more expensive. The 'clear' also has an improved taste. This variety is produced with organic hemp seed oil, has full CBD and is more suitable for inflammations such as Rheumatism, Osteoarthritis, Crohn's disease.

All this is only a small list, because CBD triggers lots of reactions in our bodies.
